Condemnation Proceedings Suspended

KINGSTON

New members of the Kingston Board of Education wasted no time in making their collective strength felt at Monday night's annual meeting, ordering property condemnation proceedings in Lake Katrine for a new high school suspended.

The resolution, passed 5-4 with Fred Hofbauer and the four new members voting in favor, was repeatedly referred to by members of that faction as a "mandate of the people," as the prime issue in their campaign for election.

It read, in part, "whereas the landslide vote indicated the voters of the district are not in favor of building a new high school at the present time, therefore be it resolved that "(the district will)" cancel condemnatiion proceedings on the Vaselevich property and cancel negotiations on the Needham and Flock properties in Lake Katrine."

A move by Evelyn Corsones to refer the matter to the building committee was rejected 5-4. Hofbauer emphasized that the resolution was needed by Aug. 1, according to the board attorney, and that financial responsibility would not be known "until it goes through the courts."

His alternative plan, which surfaced later, was renovation of the old high school, move students out of MJM Junior High, and use that as part of the high school.

Presidency of the new board went to Ward Todd, with Fred Hofbauer, self-styled leader of the new group of board members that, with himself, formed a voting block of five, elected vice president. Voting was by secret ballot.

Policy directions are tabled for review. Story on Page 3.

Two further resolutions introduced by Josephine McKean and Hofbauer were tabled. The first asked for the hiring of a Poughkeepsie architect to conduct a feasibility study for renovation of the Broadway high school, referred to the building committee after objections were raised by Doris Mulvin.

The second was a composite offering by Hofbauer with ten points, presented as the board's directions to the superintendent. Some of these aroused such a furor of protest by other board members and Superintendent Louis Salzmann that a unanimous decision was reached to refer these to the administration for review and report back to the board.

A chronological sequence of the event-filled regular board meeting a nd subsequent annual meeting:

• Newly-elected board member Richard Skala, acting as a spokesman for new board members McKean, Ronald Meyer, John Devine and himself, told the outgoing board he was gratified it had not followed through with a rumored plot to insert a defeated board member into a last minute opening created by the resignation of another member. No such move materialized.

• Final approval of the appointment of an elementary supervisor, James Neulands, was approved.

• A dean of girls department employe, Victoria Ector, was removed from her job for insubordination by board vote. She later stated that this was done because she "leaked information" to a board member.

• The $21.4 million district budget passed without any dissension, and bids for numerous district items were approved.

• Mrs. Mulvin said that she could not recommend district owned buses at this time because of the tight state aid and the condition of the budget.

• The original transportation mileage policy was passed, endorsing the scheme of measuring mileage from property line to school property line. Hofbauer's suggestion of measuring from driveway to school entrance was defeated.

• Evelyn Corsones reported all work by the building committee, except for "one major item," has been completed and chlorinators are all in and checked. She asked that those aware of problems contact the board immediately next time rather than wait six months.

• Those board members serving at their last meeting were Milton Reynolds, Tom Reynolds, Marianne Darrow, and H. Peter Hoffman.

Sanitation Workers in Wildcat Strike

New York Threatens to Become 'Stink City'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sanitation workerrs staged a wildcat strike here today and threatened to make the nation's metropolis "Stink City."

The strike was called to protest layoffs forced by budget cuts.

"We don't have one truck in the city rolling," a Sanitation Department spokesman said. "The men are in but they're not doing anything."

The spokesman said sanitation officials worked all night developing a "contingency plan" for garbage collection in anticipation of the walkout.

He would not elaborate on the specifics of the plan but did concede that "unless some of the men go back to work it probably won't be very effective."

The action came a day after the Sanitationmen's union lost a court battle in which they attempted to avoid the layoffs of 2,934 workers.

Sanitationmen's union president John DeLury had warned the city Monday "there's nothing I can do, nothing this court can do and nothing the mayor can do" to stop the job action.

DeLury warned that a prolonged strike would turn New York into "Stink City" and have worse consequences than a 1968 walkout.

In all, Mayor Abe Beame ordered the firing at midnight Monday of 19,000 city employes, including about 5,000 policemen and 2,000 firemen.

On Monday the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court, in a 3-2 decision, denied a union request to bar the layoffs, rejecting the workers' contention they would suffer "irreparable harm" by losing pension rights and other fringe benefits.

The court also indicated the union would have a tough time when the judges hear final arguments July 8 on the city's move to overturn a lower court ruling that a contract provision guarantees all sanitationmen their jobs through next June 30.

Meanwhile, the state's top political leaders hammered away today in an effort to solve a deadlock over New York City's fiscal woes and statewide school aid but no early agreement was in view.

The leaders slated a late morning meeting following a session that lasted into the early hours of today in which, a Capitol source said, "there was some movement but definitely no solutions."

The late night-early morning session eventually involved Gov. Hugh L. Carey, Lt. Gov. Mary Anne Krupsak, Republican Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson, Democrat Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut, Senate and Assembly minority leaders Manfred Ohrenstein and Perry B. Duryea respectively, and Mayor Beame.

Emerging somewhat drawn from the meeting, Beame said the city would continue its layoff program, including 5,000 police and 2,400 firemen, to affect budget cuts "pending what we work out here."

The other leaders would not go beyond a joint statement that "there was a full discussion of all matters, and while no conclusions were reached, there was agreement to resume discussions."

At the root of the trouble is a swirling controversy between Democrats, led by Carey, and Republicans, paced by Anderson, over the state's fiscal condition, New York City's budget problems and state aid to schools statewide.

Earlier Monday, there were some signs of a break when Carey indicated he had backed away somewhat from his two-month-old position that he would not approve any increases in school aid without at least $600 million in higher taxes.

'Salvation Government' Installed in Lebanon

BEIRUT (UPI) — Premier-designate Rashid Karami today installed a "salvation government" to try to pull Lebanon from the verge of civil war and an afternoon cease-fire was reportedly agreed upon by warring political factions.

The Egyptian news agency MENA quoted official Lebanese sources as saying a cease-fire had been agreed upon and would go into effect at 5 p.m. (noon EDT).

But the official Iraqi news agency, which is usually well informed on Palestinian guerrilla affairs, said guerrilla organizations in Beirut had put all their forces on maximum alert because of an escalation in the fighting.

Beirut was ablaze with dozens of fires from more than 100 explosions during the night and the casualty toll for a week of fighting between right and left-wing militias rose to more than 200 dead and 600 wounded, about half of them from the past two days of fighting.

Terrified families were trapped in burning buildings and sniper fire blocked rescue vehicles. The unchecked violence was reported spreading to other parts of the country.

Karami said the six-man cabinet, which had to overcome last minute bickering between its would-be ministers before it could be formed, would be an "interim cabinet —a salvation government to rescue Lebanon from further bloodshed."

He said it would be replaced later by a national coalition to include the country's warring right and left-wing factions once the two sides had settled their differences.

The announcement of the politically moderate cabinet appeared to have little effect on the week-long battle between rival political factions. Fierce rocket and mortar fire slammed back and forth between right and left-wing strongholds in eastern Beirut while bomb blasts and small arms fire ripped through the city's center.

Heavy automatic weapons fire erupted shortly after noon near Hamra, the city's fashionable uptown shopping district.

Beirut Radio said ambulances and fire engines were halted by intense sniper fire. It said all roads to the capital were blocked and all streets unsafe for travel.

An official said "many families" were endangered by a huge blaze burning out of control in the city's southeast quarter. Another fire destroyed at least 20 buildings in the port area.

Karami's new cabinet excluded both the right-wing Phalangists and left-wing Socialist Progressives, the two main rivals in the fighting. Announcement of the new government had been postponed a day after last minute wrangling among the appointees.

"It is not a cabinet that could or is meant to last. Either it will achieve a national reconciliation within a few months time and then expand to include the right and left or it fails and break up," an Arab political observer said.

Karami told news conference that the first task of his government will be to secure a cease-fire and then cement relations between Lebanon and the Palestinian guerrilla organizations. Those relations reached a crisis point following bloody clashes in April and May between the guerrillas and right-wing Phalangist Party militiamen. Other Lebanese developments:

—Sheikh Khalifa Ben Hamad Al Thani, the ruler of Qatar, ordered the evacuation of Qatari students in Lebanon because of the current Qatari news fighting. Some Americans and Europeans already have left Beirut.

—Lebanese Socialist Progressive Party leader Kamal Jumblatt went to Alexandria today for talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on Lebanon's current civil strife. He is leader of the largest leftwing group in Lebanon.

Koenig Won't Accept Woods' Resignation

KINGSTON

Mayor Francis R. Koenig said today that he will not accept the resignation (from the Recreation Commission) of Ronald F. Woods.

Woods, who also resigned as Liberal Party chairman, quit the Koenig Administration after the mayor and his running mate, Alderman-at-Large T. Robert Gallo, switched to the Conservative party after 16 years as Liberals.

"I won't accept his resignation," Koenig told the Freeman. "He's been a good commissioner. He's added to the commission. He's put input into it that we need. He's done a fine job."

"I think he's had a great impact on the commission and I won't accept his resignation," Koenig said.

The mayor's refusal to accept resignations from people he's appointed is not unprecedented. A few years ago he became embroiled with Harry Thayer, a member of the Landmarks Preservation Commission. Thayer announced his resignation but Koenig refused to accept it. Thayer is still a member of that commission; in fact was recently reappointed to a seven-year term by the mayor.

Whether time will heal the wounds between Koenig and the Liberal Party in general remains to be seen.

Woods charged that Koenig had "turned his back" on the people who had supported him, in announcing his resignation on Monday.

Koenig, in response, stuck to the position he took at the Conservative convention that nominated him as their candidate on Thursday night. "As I told the conservatives," he explained, "I was elected to do the job for all the people, regardless of political affiliation and I will continue with that philosophy." He said he would not run as an "independent," however.

Koenig reiterated that he saw no difference between Liberals and Conservatives, on a local level. "I don't think on a local level that you find that differential," he said. "At least I don't feel that way."

"I don't feel I've turned my back on anybody," he said.

Koenig was asked if he would accept the Republican nomination, if offered, since he feels all local political philosophies are similar.

"It's never been offered to me and I don't think it's very likely that it will," he said. He did not disagree that by following his logic it would be possible for him to accept the GOP endorsement.

Conflict at Truce Village

A U.S. Army major lies on his back, unconscious, as another U.S. soldier, an MP, is struck by a North Korean guard at the truce village in Panmunjom while the military Armistice Commission was meeting. According to eyewitnesses, more than a dozen North Korean guards and newsmen attacked two American military men following an argument between the U.S. major and a North Korean newsman which developed into a fist fight. More North Korean newsmen and guards joined in the brief fight and an American MP on guard duty rushed to the aid of the officer. (UPI)

'They Were Just Little Animals'

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — They were just little animals. Some small birds, rodents, rabbits, guinea pigs, a baby camel. But they were a bit special to their young keepers who cared for them and took care of them.

The love of their charges came easy to the high school and college students —zookeeper trainees —at the city's small children's zoo. They even gave many of the animals names.

Monday they came to work. They found their rabbits dead. Someone had dropped concrete blocks on them. And bodies of guinea pigs. Someone had stomped them. A goose sprawled on the floor, another floating dead in a pond.

Twenty-seven animals in all, stomped, stabbed and crushed to death by vandals who broke into the unguarded zoo overnight. Three other creatures were so badly injured they had to be put away.

Zoo director John Gray and his young helpers sadly collected the tiny bodies —a peacock, a rooster, two geese, seven rabbits, 16 guinea pigs.

There was more. A fourmonth-old camel, beaten on the base of the neck and its hump punctured, apparently by a sharp stick. It probably would live. So would the fox, but perhaps without one eye. Someone stabbed it with a stick.

Police said they had made no arrests, but had picked up evidence. They said the vandals were probably several juveniles. One of the officers investigating the killings had given a raccoon to the zoo several years ago. He said it had survived.

When people heard about the slaughter, Gray said, they began donating animals to replace the dead ones. By Monday night, he said, the cityrun zoo's population was almost back to normal.

"But one thing that will never be normal," Gray said, "is that the children's zoo is cared for by high school and college students, mainly gals.

"They've been taking care of the zoo the past few weeks. They've all got their pet names," he said. "They're all gone."

The zoo is back in business.

It'll take a bit longer for some broken hearts to heal.

New Village Ordinance Would Quiet the Din in New Paltz

By Carl Graham

NEW PALTZ

A word of warning to New Paltz village residents—keep the noise level down, unless you're ringing church bells or operating a public utility.

The village board Monday night approved a local law making it illegal to produce more than 75 decibels of noise by numerous methods. With the two aforementioned exceptions, the ban covers radios, phonos, musical instruments, animals and birds,out-of-repair autos, motorcycles and buses, steam whistles, and erection of buildings except from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Lawn mowers are permitted only between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. Sundays.

A man in the audience complained, saying the law put the burden of reporting violations on private citizens, few of whom had decibel meters. "The people who pass the laws should have the responsibility of enforcing them," he said.

His objection had no effect on the board, which unanimously adopted the ordinance. It becomes effective as soon as it is filed with state authorities.

A second local law, also unanimously passed, regulates peddling in public places. It sets up a long list of requirements for a license to operate an itinerant business but does not apply to religious, civic, educational or other non-profit organizations or to merchants with established places of business. Vehicles are barred from standing in one place for more than 10 minutes or for any time at all if the owner of the adjacent property objects. Sales of ice cream confections are banned within 250 feet of schools when they are in session.

"Businessmen pay taxes, and they shouldn't have competition like that," Trustee George Ackert said. Mayor John Vett said that "These itinerant businesses could look to private areas. The streets are public and should not be blocked by them."

A third law didn't fare as well, being tabled after a lengthy discussion. It would require licenses for garage and yard sales and would confine them to items owned by residents of the premises and limit them to lot lines. Sales would be limited to two three-day sales in any one calendar year and confined to the hours between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. A license would be needed.

"I have mixed feelings on this," Trustee Judith Fractenberg said. "I don't think the sales have been a big problem. I am more concerned about private citizens having to get a license for a garage sale."

Village Attorney J. Philip Zand said that "As the law stands now garage sales on private property are not permitted by the zoning laws."

The board also banned smoking at its meetings. The ban was proposed by Mrs. Fractenberg, the only smoker on the five-member board, who said she was acting in response to complaints fro non-smoking spectators at board meetings.

Natoli Appointed

TOWN OF ULSTER

The Ulster Town Board at a special meeting Monday named Anthony Natoli of Sawkill Road, RD 2, Kingston, to be superintendent of highways effective July 1.

Natoli, who is 66 and describes himself as "semi-retired," will serve the six months remaining in the term of Edgar Elliott, who announced his resignation earlier this month. Elliott's highway department is under investigation by District Attorney Francis J. Vogt's office, based on complaints of former employes about alleged "irregularities" in its conduct.

"I will take care of the roads and all complaints that come in," Natoli said after being named to the post.

A successor will be chosen in the November election and will take office for the two years beginning Jan. 1, 1976. Asked if he would be a candidate for the position, Natoli said: "I don't think so."

The new superintendent has a background of highway construction work. An employe of the town highway department many years ago, he later worked for the Ulster County Highway Department for several years and then joined Callanan Industries Inc. of New Salem Road, all as a heavy equipment operator.

Town Clerk Robert Morehouse said the vote to name Natoli to the post was unanimous, coming on a motion by Councilman Anthony Cicoria and a second by Town Justice Sherwood Davis. Councilman Edward Crosby, the lone Democrat on the five-member board, put forth the names of Robert Mitchell, Thomas Clausi and Charles Blood for consideration by the board, but did not make a formal motion for appointment of any of the three, Morehouse said.

PROPOSED NEW YORK STATE SOCIAL SERVICES PLAN

under Title XX of the Federal Social Security Act for October 1, 1975 through September 30, 1976

In January of 1975, Congress enacted a law consolidating the social services provisions of the Social Security Act under a new section, Title XX.

Title XX requires each state to develop and publish a comprehensive plan for providing services such as day care, foster care, homemakers and housekeeper and family planning.

States are allowed to select and define the services they will provide; the law requires, however, that services be directed toward the goals of self-support, self-sufficiency, preventing or remedying neglect of children and adults and preserving or reuniting families through protective services, preventing or reducing inappropriate institutional care by providing community-based and home-based care, and securing referral or admission to institutional care only where appropriate.

Services will be provided to approximately 1.7 million New Yorkers, many of whom are already receiving these or similar services under existing programs.

FUNDING: In 1975/76, services will be financed by a Federal allocation to the State of $217.5 million, matched by $36.7 million in State funds and $35.8 million in local funds. In addition to the required matching funds, the State and its localities will continue to provide substantial funds for services without Federal assistance.

THE SERVICES: under the proposed plan, the State's 58 local social services districts are authorized to provide the following services:

Adoption Services
Adult Welfare Education Services
Day Care Services for Children
Educational Services
Employment Services
Family Planning Services
Foster Care Services for Adults
Foster Care Services for Children
Health Related Services
Home Management Services
Homemaker Services
Housekeeper/Chore Services
Housing Improvement Services
Information and Referral Services
Preventive Services
Protective Services for Adults
Protective Services for Children
Social Adjustment Services
Social Group Services for Senior Citizens
Transportation Services
Unmarried Parents Services

WHO IS ELIGIBLE: Among the New Yorkers who can qualify for services under Title XX are: ● Aged, blind and disabled persons who are receiving or are eligible for Supplemental Security Income. ● All recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children as well as those eligible but not applying for this aid. ● Persons whose incomes fall within limits established by the plan. Limits are set in terms of percentages of the State's median gross income—$14,264 for a family of four—and vary according to family size. For example, for a family of four, the limit for most of the services listed above is 62% of the median gross income, or $8,844. For adoption, foster care and day care for children and senior citizens social group services, the limit is 80%, or $11,411. For smaller families, income limits are set at lower levels and for larger families they are higher.

Information and referral and protective services for adults and children are provided without regard to income.

PUBLIC COMMENT: The public is invited to review and to comment on the proposed State Title XX plan prior to formulation of the final version which will become effective October 1, 1975. A summary of the proposed plan may be obtained without charge from any of the social services district offices listed below or by calling this toll-free number:

800-342-3710

A separate volume containing proposed detailed social services plans for all 58 local districts is available for public view in each district office. The complete plan may be purchased through the State Department of Social Services (address below).

The Department will solicit public comment at seven hearings (from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.) to be held throughout the State as follows:

July 25, Nassau County Department of Social Services Auditorium, County Seat Drive, Mineola, N.Y.
July 29, Chancellors Hall, State Education Building, Albany, N.Y.
July 30, Onondaga County Court House, 401 Montgomery St., Syracuse, N.Y.
July 31, Two World Trade Center, Room 4430, New York City, N.Y.

Persons wishing to testify should notify the Department (address below) in writing at least three days in advance of the hearing.

Comments submitted in writing to the Department will also be considered if received prior to August 22, 1975. Comments should be sent to:

Demolition Derby at Dietz Stadium Dismays Mayor Koenig

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON

Sometimes a good view of things can lead to a different view of things.

Mayor Francis R. Koenig had a front row seat at a "demolition derby" at Dietz Stadium June 21 and he's not too happy about what he saw.

"Frankly, I'm concerned about the safety factors," Koenig told the Freeman today. "I've talked to the fire chief and we're both concerned about people sitting in the front section of the grandstand. It's pretty darn close to those cars."

The idea of a demolition derby—a popular event that has drawn upwards of 2,000 people to Dietz Stadium the past two years it has been there—is for a bunch of old cars to slam into each other until only one is left rolling. The "winner" gets the top prize, usually more than enough to tow his wreck home.

As practiced at Dietz Stadium, the cars do their slamming on the track portion of the field right in front of the grandstands. By Koenig's estimate there is something like ten feet separating the spectators from the action.

Althoug gas tanks are only partly filled, "gas does leak from those things," Koenig said, and it could present a danger to people in the stands.

Koenig said he didn't speak out on the danger last year because he didn't attend the event.

I'm wondering about the feasibility of holding anymore of those things under present conditions," Koenig said. He said he'll meet again with the fire chief and members of the Common Council's Building and Supply Committee before arriving at a decision.

The demolition derbies are popular, money-making affairs all around except, perhaps for the city, which charges only $100 for the use of the stadium for the event. The Kingston Baseball Association sponsored the event this year.

Koenig said that damage to the stadium and noise are not factors in his reluctance to approve any future demolition derbies at Dietz Stadium. "There is not much damage," the mayor said. "Most of it's just filling in and raking up, stuff like that." City Clerk Louis F. DeCicco said the sponsor was responsible for any damage, in any event.

Noise, Koenig says, is not a factor. "There haven't been any complaints at my office," he said. "There's more noise with the fireworks than there is for this."

As for the safety factors, Koenig is talking about "some sort of barrier to keep the cars away from the stands," but has yet to make a decision. Rumor has it that another demo derby is headed for Dietz sometime in August.

Whether or not it makes it seems to be in the hands of the city's chief executive, who after having seen one, wants to make sure, that from a safety viewpoint, they all aren't going to be exactly alike.

City Sets Date For Pool Phase II

KINGSTON

The city will go to bid on "Phase II" of the new swimming pool at Andretta Park in Dietz Stadium on July 17 virtually guaranteeing that there will be no swimming in the new pool this summer.

For all intents and purposes "summer" ends in this section of the northeast with the Labor Day Weekend and the return to school. Officially, it doesn't end until Sept. 21 but by then most area residents can be found at high school football games.

Still, city officials, hold out some hope that the pool will be completed before the end of "summer (Sept. 21) 1975."

The time-table under the most optimistic of (city) projections would call for a bid opening on July 17, a bid awarding by July 25 and work to commence within a week after that.

The contract calls for a maximum work period of 90 days—there is no minimum—but city officials, City Engineer thomas Wickman and Engineering Aid Jay Hogan, feel any contractor worth the name can do it in less than that. How much less, Wickman and Hogan are not prepared to say. They've been burned before on swimming pool predictions.

Phase I, for instance, the construction of the pool itself which went to Paddock Pools of Albany for $119,700. Contracts were signed on March 19 but ground wasn't broken until May 19 and work didn't begin until May 22. Mayor Francis R. Koenig said lter that the delay was caused by the fact the contractor was busy on other jobs and couldn't fit in the Kingston project. Koenig said there were no penalties in the contract for failure to complete the work during a reasonable (mutually agreed) period of time. He said penalties in the contract would have necessitated a "bonus" clause which might have increased the cost of the project. Koenig's thinking has appar ently changed on deadlines, as the contractor on Phase II will be given 90 days to complete his work rather than the open-ended contract granted Paddock Pools for Phase I.

Phase II includes bath houses, basket rooms and other supporting facilities for the pool. The engineering office is hoping for bids in the $85,000 to $90,000 range in order to bring the project in under its budgeted $208,000.

The money for the pool comes from two outside sources: the Andretta Family Foundation is donating up to $104,000 (as the city's share) while the State Bureau of Outdoor Recreation has granted the other $104,000.

The city is taking something of a calculated risk in advertising for bids (in Friday's Freeman) since state approval has yet to be granted for Phase II. In fact, the plans were forwarded to state officials at Bear Mountain on Monday afternoon.

The engineering office hopes to save at least a few weeks by advertising for bids at the same time the state is reviewing the plans rather than waiting for final state approval and then going to bid. Hogan says all local approvals have been secured (plumbing, electrical, board of health, etc.) and that the state had previously approved preliminary plans. "We've made all the corrections they asked for," was the way Hogan put it.

Bid opening is set for 2 p.m. on the 17th in the Council Chambers at city hall.

Policy Directives Tabled for Review

KINGSTON

The new Kingston board of education tabled for administrative review Monday night a list of ten "policy" directions proposed by vice president Fred Hofbauer, some of which were termed "unworkable" and "illegal" by others at the meeting.

The one that aroused the greatest controversy was number eight—"No summer employment will be available to ASPA (supervisors and department heads) since the contract expires June 30, 1975."

Superintendent Salzmann said that this is a "negotiable item" in the contract and as such would be "in violation of the law."

The List: 1) Fill all classes in the district to at least 90 percent of the class size as was stipulated in the last contract with teachers.

2) All administrators, supervisors, and teachers will be in the schools the number of hours as required in the last contracts. They will do monitor work including the high school wall when not assigned elsewhere.

3) Ninth period in all secondary schools will be used for academic educational subject (extra curricular and club activities will be staggered throughout the day or after school hours.)

4) All supervisors and department heads will teach at least one class at secondary levels—at elementary level, supervisors will substitute at least one day per month.

5) Move students from the MJM School to the Miller School and J.W. Bailey School with the overload housed in the Edson School.

6) Formulate plans for a renovated high school using the MJM School as part of the high school.

7) Effective July 1, 1975 when any position becomes vacant, justification must be given to the board before filling the position. The superintendant may hire or assign temporary employees for a period not to exceed 89 days in emergencies.

8) (Discussed above).

9) The superintendent of schools and his staff will prepare and submit all requests, requirements and bids at the workshop after the regular meetings.

10) All bids will be scheduled for opening between the tenth and twentieth of each month.

Politics and the CIA

There are signs that investigations of the Central Intelligence Agency could create an atmosphere in Washington similar to that which prevailed during the Watergate affair. While there is a world of difference between the Watergate scandal and the problems of monitoring intelligence activities, the CIA affair is heading down the Watergate path of reckless rumor and speculation.

The facts about Watergate eventually came out — facts shocking enough virtually to bring an administration to a hault and to force the resignation of a president. The CIA investigation is no threat to the present administration, but an orgy of suspicion and innuendo about CIA activities in the past could have as unsettling an effect on our foreign relations as did the long agony of Watergate.

The facts about the CIA overstepping its bounds in surveillance of American citizens have been laid out by the Rockefeller Commission, putting most of the speculation on that subject to rest. It is the commission's inconclusive report on alleged CIA involvement in foreign assassination plots that has opened the door for the now-familiar process of leaks of confidential information about investigations in progress.

To begin with there is a limit to the facts that can be obtained about discussions that took place among government officials a decade or more ago. Vice President Rockefeller was perhaps too candid in his remarks before a television audience about the inconclusive nature of information on the chain of responsibility for CIA activities during the Kennedy years. As he has learned, to say that a story cannot be proved false is interpreted as saying it might be true.

When President Ford turned over material on alleged assassination plots to congressional committees and the Justice Department, he urged that it be handled with "utmost prudence" in view of its extraordinary sensitivity. It is not surprising that he is already dismayed with the leaks and speculation that have ensued. While a House committee acted properly in denying access to CIA material to a congressman who leaked secret testimony once before, there are still many holes in the congressional sieve.

It would be most regrettable if responsible congressional leaders and Justice Department attorneys who, by their oath of office are obliged to exhibit sensitive prudence in handling information, are accused of a "cover-up" — another term familiar from Watergate days. The fact is that there are aspects of CIA operations that need to remain secret — not by any means to protect any individual but to protect the United States of America.

Members of the news media need to balance that consideration with their dedication to the public's right to know, and there is the additional point that the CIA investigation may involve people who are not alive to defend themselves. Above all, neither national security nor the reputation of people living or dead should be subject to speculative charges by politicians looking for a cause celebre to make names for themselves.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Keeping Tabs on Moscow's Spies

By Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — In the Soviet Union, American newsmen are watched wherever they go. TV correspondents must take along an official censor on filming trips. Even the office help in U.S. news bureaus allegedly are required to report to KGB.

In this country, Soviet newsmen are free to travel virtually where they wish. They have the same access as other newsmen to government premises. They can interview anyone who will talk to them. Their films are shipped, uncensored, to Moscow.

Yet secret files identify at least three Soviet newsmen as veteran KGB agents. The newspaper Izvestia's Washington correspondents, Stanislav Kondrashov and Yuri Barsukov, actually run an espionage operation, according to the files.

The files also claim that Vissarion Sisnev, correspondent for the Soviet labor newspaper Trud, is an outright KGB agent. Official sources tell us that other KGB men almost certainly pose as correspondents for the Communist party paper Pravda, the Soviet news agency Tass and Moscow radio-TV.

Izvestia's busy Barsukov is a human vacuum cleaner who collects press releases, congressional reports, military and foreign policy documents and every scrap of paper he can find on Capitol Hill.

His heavily spectacled sidekick, Kondrashov, moves ponderously from office to office with the grim determination of a KGB interrogator.

Together with Sisnev, they have an unparalleled outpost on Capitol Hill for espionage. Kondrashov is accredited to the congressional press galleries, Barsukov, back in Washington on a second tour, soon will be.

This accreditation gives them special access to informaton, including off-the-record briefings. They also share indirectly in the protection of the First Amendment. They develop friendships on Capitol Hill, making it awkward for federal authorities to monitor their activities.

The late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover, for example, didn't want his agents tracking suspects around the corridors of Congress. However, he made some quiet exceptions to the rule and to this day, the FBI keeps known KGB operatives under surveillance on Capitol Hill.

The FBI has been hampered, nevertheless, by a tight budget. Director Clarence Kelley has testified more funds are needed to keep up with all the Soviet representatives now in the country — double the number 10 years ago.

Footnote: Only one of the three KGB journalists returned our calls. Yuri Barskukov, in response to our inquiry about his KGB affiliation, said: "I couldn't answer that stupid question." Asked whether he would like to deny the charge, he growled: "I won't answer any more," and he hung up. A Soviet embassy spokesman said he had no knowledge that the three Soviet newsmen were intelligence agents.

STRANGE BEDFELLOWS: One of the world's strangest friendships has developed between Libyan strongman Muammar el-Qaddafi and Ugandan President Idi Amin. They are, in the judgment of diplomats, a couple of mad hatters.

Colonel Qaddafi passes out weapons to terrorists while he seeks nuclear bombs for his own arsenal. Presumably, he would bomb Israel if he could get his hands on the nuclear wherewithal. But this is by no means certain. He also has made dire threats against his own Arab brothers, including Egypt's President Sadat and Jordan's King Hussein.

The irrepressible Amin is gaining notoriety as one of history's most infamous buffoons and thugs. Over the years, he has murdered 90,000 political opponents. The latest to land on his execution list is a British lecturer who called Amin a "village tyrant" in an unpublished manuscript.

The fat Amin and skinny Qaddafi get together occasionally to exchange rhetoric about the enemies they are going to destroy. Only last month, Amin ventured to Tripoli where the Laurel-and-Hardy pair reaffirmed their "strong brotherly relations."

Diplomatic insiders suspect, however, that Qaddafi is stringing Amin along. Three years ago, say our sources, Qadaffi talked Amin into breaking relations with Israel in exchange for a promise of weapons. Amin is still waiting for his guns.

He hasn't lost his faith, however, in his Libyan friend. During a confrontation the other day with Britain's Lt. Gen. Sir Chandos Blair, Amin suddenly began shouting excitedly to his ministers: "Alert the army! Alert the air force! Call Lybia and tell Lybia to begin sending airplanes here!"

Qaddafi sent no airplanes. He has promised, however, to build some hospitals in Uganda. But insiders believe the African dictator will get his hospitals at about the same time he gets his airplanes.

On the Right

The Unhappy State of Libel Laws

By William F. Buckley

Libel suits initiated by public figures are intended to make a public point. In most instances the public figure has not been damaged in the sense that his income has diminished as the direct result of the circulation of the libel. That is why in some of the most conspicuous libel suits of the past season (in some of which I have figured), the plaintiffs have generally stipulated that compensatory damages were not sought. Instead plaintiffs have asked the court to award damages that speak to the intrinsically defamatory nature of the libel; and to punish the tortfeasor for proceeding to write something he had every reason to believe was both wrong and defamatory.

As most people know, in 1964 in New York Times vs. Sullivan, the Supreme Court ruled that public officials could not recover unless they could prove "actual malice" on the part of the defendant. Since that ruling, a number of others wandering in disparate directions have been laid down, sometimes appearing to make it almost impossible to libel a public figure; and at other times, urging over towards a metaphysical affirmation that even public figures can appeal to the courts for the protection of their good name. One such case recently arose in New York , and it illuminates the residual injustice in the federal libel law as it has crystallized.

Along comes this jerk feller, the former presidet of a Protestant college, who is gulled by an organization ostensibly concerned to isolate extremists on the left and on the right, but which is actually concerned to harass kooky-right. The former college president is back teaching the history of religion, and taking himself most seriously as guardian of the polemical manners of his fellow Americans. He writes me a letter suggesting that unless I reform my ways, he will disapprove of me. I reply that I had never heard of him until a couple of months earlier, was unaware that his approval was a collector's item, ask him to explain any inaccuracy in anything I have written for which I would promptly apologize, and invite him otherwise please to go away.

A year or so passes by and the gentleman publishes a book under the august imprint of a major New York publishing house, alleging that I am to the American conservative movement what Von Ribbentrop was to the Nazis; that I make my living by lying about other people and by insinuating the Fascist line into my work. As editor of a journal of opinion which espouses positions that were once thought fit to live only in the fever swamps of the crazy right, I have felt in behalf of my colleagues, a collegiate responsibility to resist that kind of thing; so I sued — the publisher, and the author.

From the beginning, I asked for a) an apology; and b) reimburse-ment of the lawyers' fees, which at that twinkling point in time were only a few hundred dollars. The publishers were too principled to meet the demand, and five years later, after seven days of trial, we settled out of court . . .

Leaving the college professor who, pleading impoverishment, appeared pro se, and for a few horrible moments until the judge told him for gawdssakes to cut it out, the professor actually referred to himself in the third person. The judge, by the way, proved to be one of those exemplary jurists — thorough, fair, courteous. But if a political cell ever stirred in his blood, it was leeched out some time before he reached kindergarten. Intending no criticism, it required the judge as much time to learn to distinguish between permissible and impermissible modalities of political discussion, as it would take me to learn about toxic and innocent varities of mushrooms. The result was entirely satisfactory — I mean, the judge meditated deeply on the matter, and reached, in an 84-page document, an unassailable conclusion, namely that the wretched professor, while decrying political irresponsibility, had engaged in it: and the judge whacked him $7,500.

Now that may seem a lot of money, but even the judge, who until recently was a successful Wall Street lawyer, knows that it is peanuts alongside the expense of paying lawyers to bring litigation. But — said the judge — 7,500 bucks is a lot of scratch for a professor. Which is true. But why isn't there a law like England's — or like Connecticut's? — that says flatly: either a defendant apologizes immediatly on being sued, or, if he is proved guilty of libel, he is required to pay the legal costs of the action that brought him to heel.

What can be fairer than that? As it now stands even if you win a token judgment, you lose, net. And, worse, abstract justice is then only for those who can sustain the loss. That is a lousy arrangement, and those who really do worry about free speech should worry about the chilling effect of the practical unavailability of the libel mechanism for men and women who dare to enter public life.

Nicholas Von Hoffman:

Theodore White Views Nixon

WASHINGTON — Tom Snyder has made a large name for himself on television interviewing the three ends of two-headed calfs and other freaks of nature. From time to time, though, he deviates from Believe-It-or-Not-Ripley-type guests and puts a non-curiosity on his NBC Tomorrow show.

The other night it was Theodore H. ("The Making of the President" series) White. The occasion was the publication of Mr. White's newest book on the un-making of President Nixon, but for the audience it was also a chance to see how a successful, well-connected, establishmentarian journalist thinks and looks at the part of the world he reports on. As such he can be allowed to stand as a representative of a number of others who once had many flattering things to write about Mr. Nixon and now must occasionally wonder how they could have been so badly had.

"There are no saints and no villians in history," he says, thereby making the conventional obeisance to upper-class notions of complexity, but for Mr. White, Mr. Nixon is Milton's devil in "Paradise Lost," the best and the most gifted of angels who went sour.

After mentioning detente and China with approval, he says, "(Nixon) got the young men out of the draft. He did a spectacular environment program, the best of any industrial nation in the world . . . you have to understand that this man did so much good in his years in office, and then you say to yourself, 'How could he be so stupid, so cheap, so mean . . . so ferocious, so cruel?' . . . I will do my best to understand, but there are certain things to which are unforgivable."

To White the men President Nixon chose to surround himself with are "real, swinish brutes" and "hustlers" rotten with "squirming ambition."

This is the kind of language that those who opposed Nixon when he was in office used but would probably qualify now. Yet here is White, a man in such good favor in the time of the Nixon White House that he could get a private interview with the President, saying yes sir, there are too villians and none more wicked than this fallen angel.

White is so angry because he takes it so personally. Can you conceive of the mot unregenerate anti-Nixon leftist saying: "What I hold against Richard Nixon is he almost shattered my confidence in our country's ability o run itself . . . I was disappointed in Johnson (but) disappointed, deceived and hurt by Richard Nixon."

Blurting something like that out transcends the embarrassment of looking like a jackass because one once wrote complimentary sentences about Nixon. This comes closer to a child's lashing out at being told Santa Claus is a guy on Macy's payroll. White has been doing his reporting of Presidents with the critical eye of a Peruvian monk freshly come to Rome to look on the face of his Pope:

"The people anoint and elect the President. The people express the will of God, (if) such there be. And thus, the Presidet, whether he knows it or not, is a high priestly figure, he is a sacerdotal figure . . . Washington, Lincoln, Roosevelt were really ennobled by the office . . . Men went to die because Lincoln said they must and because Franklin Roosevelt said they must."

The grandeur and the brilliance of the office is so great that White says he is mentally incapacitated when in the same room with a President: "I've been in the White House, in and out, now under five Presidents, and I'm always scared when I speak to a President. Some people go in there and they freeze up and they forget what they're going to ask the President . . . I always have had that sense of awe, so that normally, if I do want to speak to a President, I will send a note in advance saying, 'I want to talk to you about this and this and this.' "

There must be tourists waiting in line with their Kodaks who're in better emotional shape to observe what's going on in the Presidential Mansion than the ga-ga White: "The White House is an eerie place. It's so quiet and it's so hushed and it's so eautiful . . . There are buttons there that run everywhere. They can drop bombs or build hospitals or whatever you want."

White wants to worship. As he says: "I suffer from incumbentitis . . . I'm not going to be a spitball journalist." He also says: "We have a larger percentage of decent politicians in this country than in any other I've covered, and I respect most politicians (but) when I find a crook, I'll burn him. When I find a liar, I'll call him a liar."

With the eyes through which White sees, one wonders how he will ever catch a crook or discern a liar. By his own description, he is not the most suspicious of men, but crook catching isn't the primary business of journalists.

Their primary business is, regardless of their ideology, understanding the world intelligently enough to be able to distinguish what might conceivably be thought of as news from official diapasons of glory. White couldn't, nor did most of the other renowned names in journalism and, while you might say that the last time out the crooks were caught, it wasn't by journalists but by police reporters, nd that may be why the people in our business are the first to know and the last to understand.

Former Ad Executive Arrested

By Matt Spireng

KINGSTON

A former New Jersey advertising sales executive who, according to authorities, allegedly stole some $47,000 from the Mahwah, N.J. firm where he was employed was arrested Monday in Kingston.

Kingston Police arrested Walter E. Blake, 63, of 41 Johnston Avenue, on New Jersey warrants charging him with two counts of counterfeiting and one count of fraud. He was jailed without bail pending extradition proceedings.

According to authorities, Blake was formerly employed by David M. Douglas Inc. He allegedly sold advertising for the company and was paid for it, but did not turn the money over to the firm, New Jersey police indicate. The total amount of money allegedly stolen by Blake was $47,000, police said.

It was not immediately known when Blake moved to Kinston.

Meanwhile, in other area police matters:

The first prostitution arrest in the City of Kingston reportedly in at least 20 years was made Monday night by Kingston detectives.

Lisa Rosenthal, 22, of 100 Pearl Street was charged by police with prostitution. Arrested with her was a youth identifed as Robert Comormon, 18, of 100 Pearl Street, who was charged with promoting prostitution in the third degree. The charges are misdemeanors.

According to detectives, Comormon was allegedly profiting from Miss Rosentahl's illegal activities. He was jailed in lieu of $500 bail; she was jailed in lieu of $250 bail.

Agents of the U.S. Treasury Department Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) arrested 12 persons Monday, including eight licensed firearms dealers, in a six-county roundup on charges of illegally selling explosives, automatic weapons, sawed-off shotguns, rifles and handguns. The arrests, culminating a year long investigation, were made in Dutchess, Orange, Sullivan, Putnam, Westchester and Fairfield (Conn.) counties.

ATF officials said the roundup of licensed firearms dealers was the largest in the ortheast since a 1968 law governing firearms sales went into effect.

Dealers charged included: Robert Novotny, 28, of Yonkers, a Westchester County parkway patrolman; Herbert W. Beaumont, 46, of Brwster; Robert Herbst, 40, and Patrick Centofante, 43, both of Patterson; John S. Mastrocchio, 40, of New Fairfield, Conn.; Quintan Hapke, 25, of Midddletown; Leo Cecil, 36, of Monticello; and Robert Laden, 37, of Westbrookville.

Others arrested included: Robert Maynard, 37, and Milton Kessman, 63, both of Patterson; Thomas Cogar, 28, of Pawling; and Joseph Powers, 32, of Walden.

Maximum penalties range from five years in prison and $5,000 fines to 10 years in prison and $10,000 fines.

John G. Bridge, 11, of 65 Broadway, Kingston, was listed in satisfactory condition today at Kingston Hospital after being struck by a car Monday night at Kingston Point Beach. Police said the driver of the car told them he looked behind his parked vehicle before climbing into it, waited some five minutes for some other persons, and then backed up, striking the boy who he said was lying under the car. The driver, Spencer Marshall, 26, of 125 Franklin Street, was not charged.

'Big Trouble' For Big Deep

WOODSTOCK

"Big Deep", one of Woodstock's favorite swimming holes, is in deep trouble again with sewage contaminating its waters.

The Ulster County Health Department announced Monday that Big Deep has been closed until a safe quality of water can be determined. Testing by the department each week will continue in hopes that what has been a chronic situation will be alleviated.

Recent tests disclosed an excess of intestinal bacteria due to pollution from the rainy season and sewage from nearby homes.

The health department is taking dye tests of sewage systems on the nearby properties in hopes of tracing the exact location of the contamination.

Big Deep's problems go back five years, but the trouble in 1970 stemmed from resident protests of the swimming holes being used by nude swimmers and hippies. In 1974 Big Deep was closed in August for the rest of the season when sewage was believed to be the factor. Woodstock does not have a municipal sewer system, so quantities of sewage invariably creep into the Sawkill Creek which feeds Big Deep.

Last year the bacteriological count exceeded acceptable standards as it does now.

Liberals Endorse, but . . .

KINGSTON

Claiming they had too little time to find good candidates for mayor and alderman-at-large, Ulster County Liberals Monday night failed to nominate condidates for the two top Kingston city posts.

"We are not going to run revenge candidates," County Chairman Donald I. Short said, commenting on the recent defection of Liberal standard bearers Mayor Francis R. Koenig and Alderman-at-Large T. Robert Gallo. "If we had someone good, we would run candidates, but we didn't have enough time to find them," Short said. Koenig and Gallo accepted Conservative Party endorsement last Thursday night.

County Liberals did endorse the candidacies of a number of city and county candidates including William C. Mullany who seeks the post of Surrogate and Ellen Becker who is running for coroner in hopes of abolishing that office in favor of a edical examiner.

All Democratic members of the Kingston Common Council with theexception of the Conservatively-endorsed Peter Mancuso, received Liberal support as did City Legislator James Gilpatric, a Democrat.

The Liberals also endorsed six other cindidates for the legislature including James McCardle of the new Dist. 5; David Menzies and Mary Messina of new Dist. 3 and three Wawarsing candidates, incumbents George Barthel and Louis Resnick and newcomer Pauline Venenzia, all of new Dist. 1.

The party, which said it has not been debating between endorsement of either Republican County Clerk Albert Spada or Democratic contender Lewis C. Kirschner, failed to name a candidate for the county clerk's post.

Democratic Common Council candidates receiving Liberal support include: John Coffey, First Ward; Joseph McGrane, Second; James DiPietro, Third; Clarence Stoutenburgh, Fourth; John Finch, Fifth; Doanld Quick, Sixth; James Howard, Sevent; Emilio Primo Jr., Eighth; Philip DeCicco, Ninth; Clifford G. Sinsabaugh, Tenth; Daniel Smith, 11th; Henry Dreiser, 13th.

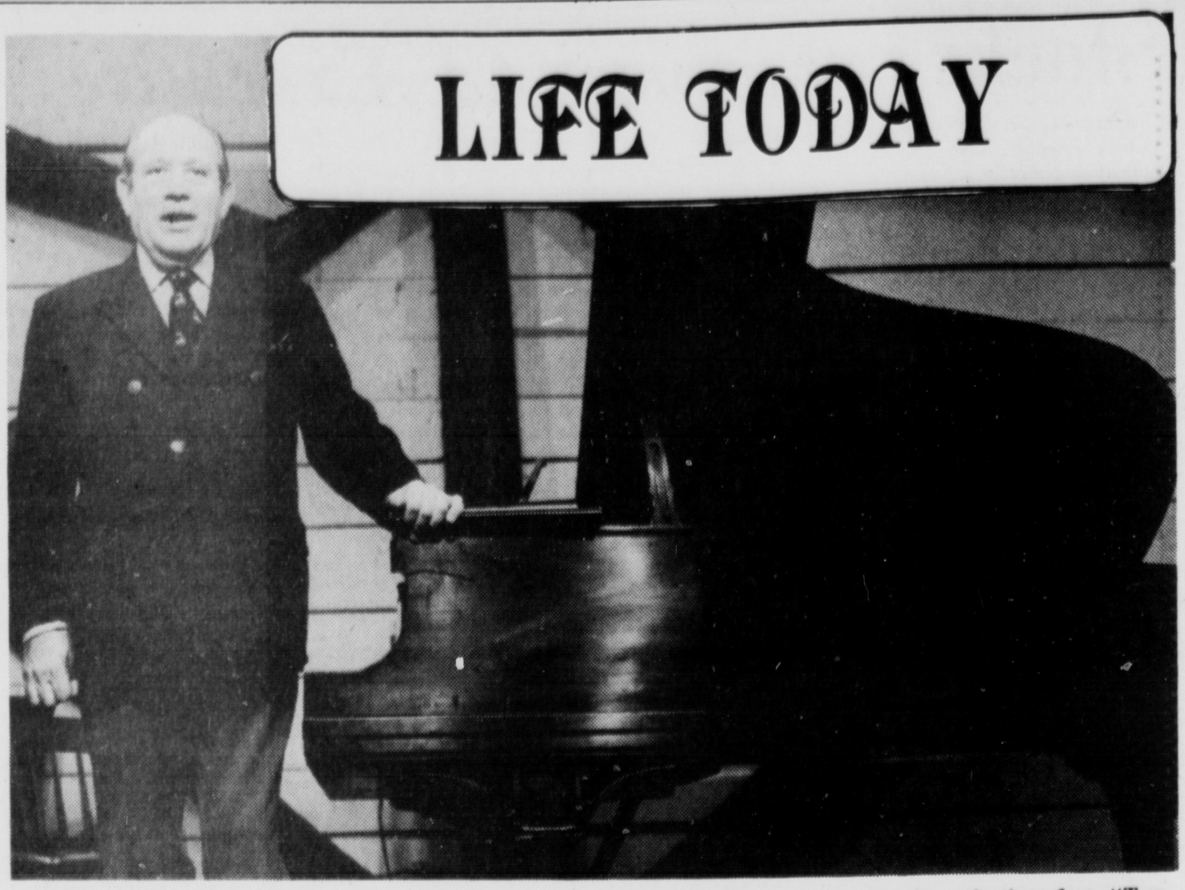
LIFE TODAY

Long-time Woodstocker Mrs. Alexander Padwa and her daughter, Tanya, listen as Tanya's father, Vladimir Padwa, who first played at the Maverick almost a half a century ago, returned as guest pianist at the celebration concert.



Pianist Vladimir Padwa onstage just prior to playing "Song of the Mississippi" and other selections from "Tom Sawyer," the ballet suite he composed.

A Wonderful Time Was Had by All At Maverick's 60th Anniversary

By Tobie Geertsema

A wonderful time was had by all at the 60th Anniversary Celebration at Woodstock's Maverick Concert Hall, home of the longest, continuing, uninterrupted chamber music series in America — and one of the better-known musical endeavors in the world. For their Midsummer Night gala, the Concerts Committee offered a program by four distinguished musicians in the rustically durable Maverick Hall, a heavily trafficked bar, and dancing in the hall after dinner to the popular music of Marc Black and his group.

It was a party at which more than 300 guests feasted on a sumptuous picnic-in-a-basket dinner of Southern Fried chicken, homemade potato salad, cherry tomatoes, home baked onion rolls, and a dessert table offering everything from mocha and chocolate layer cakes to cream puffs and eclairs. Served by hostesses under a colorful, striped, balloon-festooned tent, the dinner buffet was accompanied by a generously spiked champagne punch.

Guests had been invited to appear in costumes or attire appropriate for frolicking with the Bard to the theme of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." But, obviously preferring to accentuate the opposite, they pretty much ignored Shakespeare's world of nocturnal dreams. The bucolic imagery of the play and even the opportunity to play Puck was bypassed in favor of current chic. A woman in a long, striped shirtdress danced with a man in a Hawaiian flowered tunic. Other guests were resplendent in football player numbered sweatshirts, embroidered Mexican peasant dresses, Oriental and Indian prints, polka dot ties, bib overalls and madras jackets.

For the high-flying success of the party, those attending were indebted to Rose Koplovitz and her committee (responsible for the gala itself); Hollister Sturges, Chairman of the 60th Season Committee; and far too many other Friends of the Maverick Sunday Concerts to mention.

The pre-dinner concert drew round upon round of applause and proved, once again, why the Maverick, over the years, has provided innumerable hours of delightful entertainment to area residents. It was an indication that this season, marking the series' sixth decade, will be a very special one.

For Vladimir Padwa, who played several piano selections from "Tom Sawyer," the ballet suite he composed, it was "like coming home again." It had been, he said "almost half a century ago that I first played here."

There were waves of applause, too, for pianist Nina Lugovoy and violinist Charles Libove, playing selections by Fritz Kreisler as a twosome; for flutist Karl Kraber, whose sense of humor was infectious, and who offered the compositions of two French musicians; and for Lugovoy-Libove-Kraber as a trio with the acoustical sound of a full orchestra.

Welcoming the concert and party goers was Ernest Marmorek, chairman of the board of directors, and introducing the guest artists was Leo Bernache, a musician who has himself performed at The White House and now has charge of booking talent into the Maverick. Bernache promised a "very exciting season," and, if this kick-off event is any indication, he will have no reason to change his tune.

It was a memorable night that served as a living testimonial to the many members of the community who have given much in time and affection to the work of the Maverick, including the guest musicians for the evening, who contributed their services.

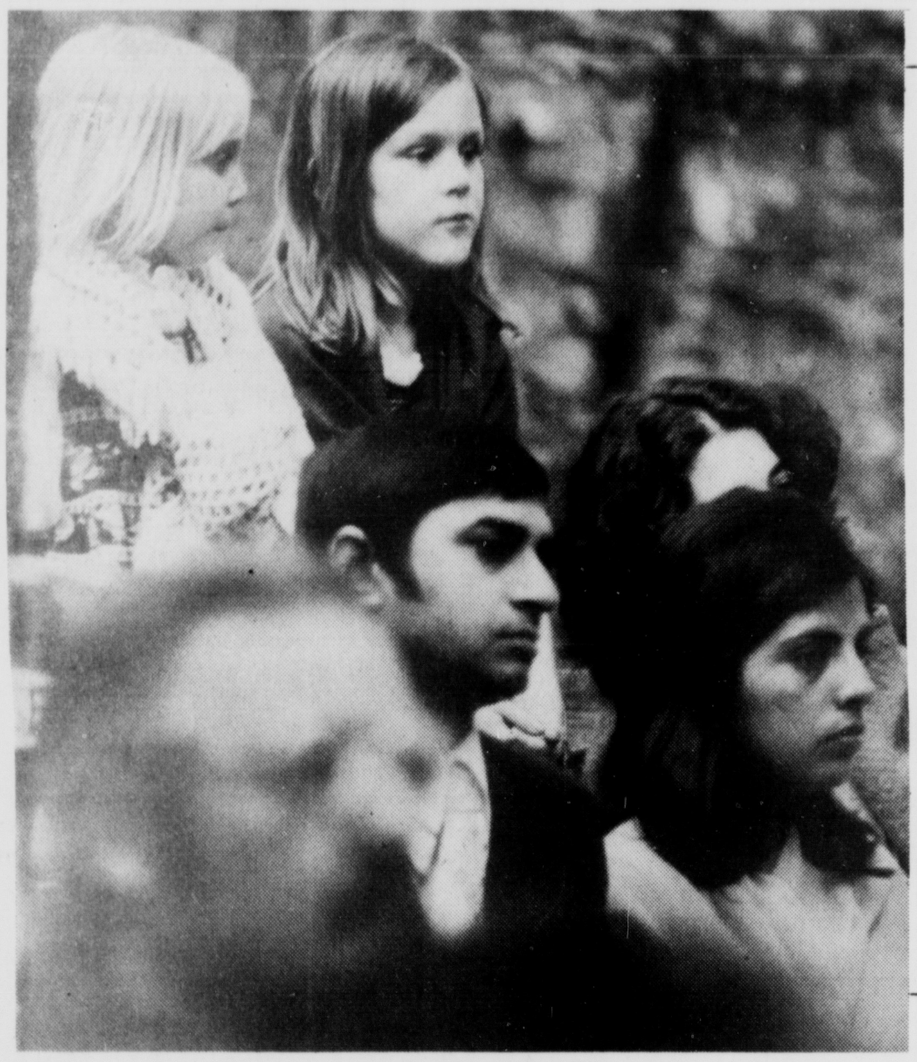
The rustic, old hall has, perhaps, never heard such a roar of applause beneath its vaulted ceiling — and, certainly, has never had so many dancing feet on its slated floorboards.

To have been a part of such a night was to remember Hervey White, who presided over the building of the ever-durable hall and founded the concerts so many decades ago. And to realize that his "concept" of encouraging musicians and audiences to share superlative sounds in a forested environment is as valid today as ever.

With a 60th anniversary brewing (concerts every Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m. from now through Labor Dy), and — so, many years after his death — the name and fame of Hervey White remain greatly alive, a legend that defies the changing years.

White's Maverick has survived as a place for intimate concerts. And in the jam-packed crowd that created a traffic jam into the hall at the celebration fete, there is every indication that this season will be marked by a remarkable resurgence.

In its 60th year, the Maverick will be proving once again that culture is an entertainment for the whole man . . . an entertainment that can only leave one in a pleasant state of mind.



In the woods outside the jam-packed concert hall, overflow crowd of young and not-so-young listened to the music at benefit event kicking off the Maverick Concerts summer season.

Charles Libove, violinist, and one of the guest musicians who contributed his services for the fund-raising Maverick benefit concert and party.

Leo Bernache, in charge of booking and programming for the Maverick, introduced guest artists at the 60th Anniversary Celebration of the long-lived concert series; promised "a very exciting season for 1975."

Unwed Mother Tells Suitor She's 'Divorced'

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago, I had a child out of wedlock. I never married the baby's father, but we lived together as husband and wife up until six months ago. When we decided to split up, there was no big scene and no hard feelings. He quietly moved out.

I told the peiple at work that my "husband" and I were splitting up. Naturally, they assumed we were getting divorced.

An attractive bachelor (one of the bosses) asked me for a date. I accepted, and we hit it off wonderfully well. One date led to another, and now we are together almost every evening and weekends.

I know he is serious about me. He asked me if I had filed for divorce yet, and I avoided giving him a straight answer. Here is where I need your help.

If I confess that I had a child out of wedlock and never married the baby's father, yet lived with him for over two years, I wonder what this other guy will think of me.

I don't want to make up any lies, but if I tell him the truth, he might think I'm a tramp. How much should I tell him?

NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: Tell him everything. Your past doesn't necessarily make you a "tramp." Many learn and mature from past mistakes, and the fact that you don't want to lie now shows that you have both learned and matured. Level with him, and good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that most of the better apartment-house owners will accept a couple with dogs or cats but won't rent to a couple with a child? The most damage our 4-year-old son could do is to crayon up the walls, whereas a dog or cat could completely ruin the place.

We are sick to death of being turned away as though we were undesirables because we have a child. I am also insulted that my son is classed lower than a dumb animal. We would be willing to put up a deposit to cover any damages our little 30-pounder might do.

Print this, please. I am sure other parents of young children share my problem.

MRS. B.

DEAR MRS. B.: I sympathize, dear. But it's not only property damage that concerns apartment owners. Children sometimes make more noise than some adults can tolerate.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Gloomy Forecast From Budget Office

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Congressional Budget Office says increases in oil prices expected this fall can take $33 billion out of the U.S. economy, reawaken inflation and drag out the recovery.

Based on its expectation that oil prices are going up, CBO issued a report Monday forecasting a gloomy economic situation for the next 18 months.

The report predicted the recent decline in the inflation rate can be expected to reverse, with prices resuming their upward march, and the recovery from the recession will be sluggish, with unemployment almost as severe at the end of 1976 as it was at the start of 1975.

If the worst happens on the oil front, the effect will be about as severe as the 1973 embargo and fourfold price rise by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, CBO said.

The report calculates events as likely to add about $5.50 to the price of a barrel of oil by the end of 1976. That compares to the average increase of $5.35 in 1973.

Going into the $5.50 would be an additional $1 a barrel import fee, a $2.25 OPEC increase this fall and phased "decontrol" of domestic oil prices, as President Ford recommends.

If domestic oil prices increase $5.50 and consumption remains stable, the cost would be $33 billion.

"Households and businesses, that is, would have to reduce nonoil outlays or savings by $33 billion to maintain their level of oil consumption," CBO said. "And this allows only for higher oil prices; if prices of natural gas and coal also increase, the cost would be closer to $40 billion.

"This would represent a direct loss of purchasing power almost twice as great as the increase provided by the recently enacted tax cut.

"A similar reduction in purchasing power in 1973 and 1974 occurred as a result of the OPEC embargo; the sharp cutback in real spending it produced was a major factor in the current economic downturn."

Largely as a result of the expect oil price rise, these were the CBO predictions for the next 18 months:

—After falling to an annual rate of 5 percent in May, consumer prices will climb to a rate of 6.3 to 8.7 percent by the end of next year.

—The unemployment rate will be 7.8 to 8.2 percent by the end of 1976, compared to the White House prediction of 7.6 percent at that time and a rate of 9.2 percent in May.

Heavy Handed Tactics Denied By FBI Chief

OGLALA, S.D. (UPI) — The FBI denies its men are using heavyhanded tactics in the search of the Pine Ridge Oglala Sioux Reservation for the killers of two of its agents.

Indians have charged agents had entered their homes without warrants and had otherwise acted in heavyhanded fashion.

FBI spokesman Tom Coll denied it Monday.

"There may be people out there armed but we're not getting heavyhanded," he told a press briefing.

Agents Jack Coler and Ronald Williams, both 28, were shot down Thursday when they tried to serve a warrant at a house in Oglala. Authorities said the slayings were execution style and that some Indians at the house were entrenched in bunkers.

One Indian was killed in a subsequent shootout.

About 200 heavily armed agents were searching the 3,000-acre reservation for the 16 persons the FBI believed were involved in the killings.

One man, Herman Thunder Hawk, was arrested during the weekend and has been questioned. But FBI officials said they were not sure he was at the house at the time of the shootings.

Coll said no negotiations were planned with leaders of the militant American Indian Movement, a major dissenting faction on the reservation and the leading group in a 71-day occupation of the hamlet of Wounded Knee in 1973.

A woman who claimed she was a relative said Monday the Indian killed Thursday, Joseph Stuntz, 24, may have been an AIM member.

Ruth Stuntz of Monticello, Ind., said Stuntz was one of three Indian children she had adopted. She said she believes he joined AIM about two years ago. His wife and two sons live in Washington State, she said.

Breeder Reactor Is Downgraded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Energy Research and Development Administration, born six months ago in the breakup of the old Atomic Energy Commission, has cast aside the allnuclear view of America's energy future pushed for so long by the AEC.

That, at least, is the message in ERDA's new 25-year blueprint for U.S. energy research and in a ruling by Dr. Robert Seamans Jr., the agency's chief, rejecting key conclusions in an AEC environmental assessment of the nuclear breeder reactor.

ERDA's energy research blueprint, unveiled Monday, downgraded the role of the controversial breeder reactor and upgraded the status of solar power research. It ranked the breeder, solar generation of electricity and nuclear fusion as equally unproven but potential energy sources for the 21st century.

Seamans, announcing his decision on the impact statement a few hours later, said he considered the breeder in light of ERDA's instructions from Congress to stress both nuclear and nonnuclear energy sources. That perspective, he said, "naturally differs from that of the AEC."

The decision sai AEC's impact statement failed to justify plans for commercial use of the breeder because it did not answer many key health, safety and security questions. But, Seamans ruled, the statement did justify a gonernment breeder demonstration program.

What America needs, ERDA said, is to press ahead to develop a balanced mixture of future energy sources. The agency said it would be a serious mistake to once again put all the nation's energy eggs in a single basket, as was done with coal and later with oil.

To the U.S. nuclear industry, the news was less than satisfactory. It was hardly more pleasing, however, to environmentalists who have fought hard against any development of the breeder.

"ERDA seems to have said a lot of things the old AEC would never have said about the need for balance and not just rushing ahead with the breeder," said a spokesman for the Natural Resources Defense Council. "But ... budget doesn't seem to have caught up with the rhetoric."

NRDC expressed special concern that a breeder reactor demonsration program planned at Oak Ridge, Tenn., although slowed by the latest ERDA decision, is still well ahead of other programs that might demonstrate nonnuclear energy systems and thus is in a better position to get scarce federal funding.

If ERDA really does not forsee the breeder as a major source of energy before the 21st century, the NRDC spokesman said, there is no need to press ahead now with the breeder demonstration plant.

Amin Spares Hills From Friday Death

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Ugandan President Idi Amin announced today he has decided to spare the life of British lecturer Dennis Hills, sentenced to death by a Ugandan military court for treason.

Amin made the announcement at a news conference after talks with Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko.

Hills was sentenced to death before a firing squad for calling the unpredictable Amin a "village tyrant" in a still-unpublished manuscript. His execution had been postponed until Friday after Queen Elizabeth II appealed for clemency.

Amin spoke to newsmen at Mobutu's estate at Nsele, 36 miles outside Kinshasa, where he met with Mobutu following his arrival Monday for a two-day state visit.

The burly Ugandan president, who has been engaged in a bitter diplomatic dispute with Britain over the Hills case, said he would notify the British charge d'affaires in Kinshasa later today of his decision to grant clemency to Hills.

He did not say whether Hills sentence would be commuted to a term of imprisonment.

Amin said he had asked President Mobutu to use his good offices to serve as mediator between him and the British government on all aspects of British-Ugandan relations.

Amin had announced his intention to have Hills, 61, executed by firing squad at 5 p.m. Friday for "high treason." Mobutu was one of a number of African leaders who had interceded with Amin on Hills' behalf.

Before his meeting with Mobutu, Amin had insisted the only way to save Hills would be for British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan to come to Uganda before the time set for the execution. But Callaghan said he would not go to Uganda under duress.

Ali, 'Bowing to Pressure', to Meet Frazier Next

Staggered

Muhammad Ali lands a good right to jaw of challenger Joe Bugner, who is staggered by blow, during 14th round of championship fight. Ali retained title with unanimous decision. (UPI)

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — Muhammad Ali retained his world heavyweight boxing championship Tuesday morning with a unanimous 15-round decision over European challenger Joe Bugner in intense tropical heat which took its toll of both fighters.

The 33-year-old Ali said before entering the canopied ring at Merdeka (Independence) Stadium in the Malaysian capital that he had bowed to pressure that he call off his retirement and, even before disposing of Bugner, said he would defend the crown against Joe Frazier in Manila Oct. 1.

Bugner, who opened a slight cut around the champion's left eye in the seventh round, was aggressive from the opening bell but simply did not have it in his repertoire to handle the confident, ringwise champion.

The officials gave Ali eight rounds, the 25-year-old Bugner two and called five even in a bout which ended with the challenger's manager screaming for Bugner to start punching.

"The heat was bad," Ali said of the 90-degree temperatures made even less tolerable by television lights. "I thought I would knock Joe out in 10 rounds but I couldn't."

Only about 15,000 spectators turned up at the 38,000-seat stadium because the match was televised locally but milions watched Ali's 16th title fight over a worldwide closed-circuit theater and tv hookup. The King and Queen of Malaysia occupied a special ringside section.

"It was the heat that did me in," said the 6-foot-4 Bugner, who entered the ring at 230 pounds. "I don't think I'm finished yet. I'll come back and have another go at it. This was just unbelievable heat."

Promoter Don King said Ali, who got $2.5 million for his fight Tuesday, probably will pick up nearly twice that amount for the bout in Manila. Bugner received $500,000 and Frazier's cut in Manila probably should approach $2 million, King said at ringside.

Ali was easily in control of the opening rounds, with Bugner adopting a peek-a-boo defense similar to the "rope-a-dope" tactics the champion uses in leaning back on the ropes and covering his head. Ali's cut was hardly noticeable until the late rounds and trainer Angelo Dundee said after the fight "I never used any cut stuff (medicine) on it."

"Joe Bugner will be the next champion when I retire," Ali said, reiterating a prediction he made in February, 1973, when he decisioned the Hungarian-born challenger in 12 rounds in Las Vegas. "I know he can do it. Joe Frazier didn't give me such a rough time. Ken Norton did not and (George) Foreman did not."

Frazier, who occupied a ringside seat and exchanged a few words with A li prior to the opening bell, said he was unimpressed with the champion's showing here. Ali weighed 225 pounds at last Saturday's official weigh-in an said before the fight he was "in the best shape of my life.

"I might have appeared to have been victorious but I guarantee you I feel worse than he does at ms age and I was in extra good shape," Ali said in his dressing room.

No American or British officials were used in the fight here at the insistence of the Malaysian Boxing Federation. The bout was refered by Takeo Ugo, a Japanese who officiated at 41 previous world championships. The judges were Australian Ken Brady and Sut ee Phrom Jariak of Thailand.

Using the five-point "must" system of scoring, Ugo scored the fight 73-67 for Ali. Brady's card was 72-65 and Suthee scored it 73-62.

Ali's best chance at a knockout came in the final half-minute of the fight, when he had Bugner in his own corner, slightly stunned, and was delivering right and left-hand combinations to the Briton's head.

Andy Smith, who has been Bugner's manager-trainer since he began boxing at age 16, screamed at Bugner to open up in the final round. "Hit him Joe! hit him!" Smith shouted. He threw up his hands in dismay at the final bell.

Ali's brother, Rahman, moved up to the champion's corner from The $500 ringside seats in the final two rounds, yelling "You're fighting for a cause! Don't let him take the title!"

Bugner came out punching in the first round, something he had not been expected to do so early, and Dundee said the tactics "knocked Ali off his battle plan." Ali had predicted a "surprise" for the first round but whatever he had in mind apparently went out the window with Bugner on the attack.

"Bugner fought a great fight," Dundee said. "But I think he was kind of awkward about wanting to trade with Muhammad because if you trade with Muhammad you get nailed." He said that if Bugner had stood toe-to-toe with him, "Muhammad would have knocked the guy out."

Ali planned to leave Kuala Lumpur Wednesday morning for a five-day holiday as guest of Tun Mustapha Harun, chief minister of Sabah state of the northern tip of Borneo. Mustapha is one of the world's richest men, having made millions in the timber industry.

Bugner was expected to remain here for a couple of days before flying back to Britain.

More Action In Garden

NEW YORK (UPI) — The bell sounded, ending the color-cast from Kuala Lumpur.

The lights in Madison Square Garden came up and the crowd of 13,496 headed for the exits Monday night, not bothering to wait for the formality of decision.

A fight it was not, but then do you go to see Muhammad Ali fight or put on a show?

The champion gave them a show, using Joe Bugner as a foil. A little of this, a little of that. Here's how you float like a butterfly and, oh yes, you sting like a bee. (In the closing seconds of a round, the jab flicks into the handsome challenger's face.)

And now, how about a little rope-a-dope? This wowed them in Zaire and it went over pretty good in Cleveland against Chuck Wepner. Want a variation? Here it is, in the sixth round. He assumed the posture, hands up to face, fanny settling into the ropes. But wait, he's in the middle of the ring. Why, it's a rope-a-dope without the ropes. Bugner is confused, and the crowd laughs.

Naturally, the shuffle now and again. Naturally, talk it up to Bugner, but the Hungarian-born challenger is no conversationalist. No matter, the lines are old ones, copywrighted by Ali when he was still Cassius Clay.

The rounds tick off. Bugner plods along, throwing punches from a lesson book, getting caught by the hook.

"He's doing the best he can," observes Don Dunphy from ringside after eight rounds, "but he's just not winning anything."

Yet for Ali, pointing now for Joe Frazier in Manila on Oct. 1, this third title defense in 100 days, his unanimous verdict over Bugner was all according to the plans made ever since that Oct. 31 pre-dawn knockout of George Foreman. He keeps his aging 33-year-old body in superb shape by disposing of what theoretical challengers there are around. His target has been Frazier, and now, with these three workouts behind him, the acting must be over.

In quiet moments, Ali will admit that the two fights with Frazier "were hell." They have gone 27 rounds and only Ali, in the first fight, has been on the floor.

The two live fights in the Garden, the lightheavyweight battle of the two Argentinians, Jorge Ahumada and WBA champion Victor Galindez, and the middleweight match of WBA veteran king Carlos Monzon, also of Argentina, and New Orleans' hope, Tony Licata, offered more action than what came from Malayasia.

Galindez probably took permanent possession of Ahumada, winning a unanimous decision for his fourth win over Ahumada in their five meetings. The scoring was odd, though. Judge Bill Recht had it 10-3-2, referee Jimmy Devlin 9-5-1. The Argentine official, Raul Amadeo saw it as 6-2-7!

Galindez, a raging bull when in trouble, came to roaring life when he suffered a cut over his left eye in the eighth round. He had had Ahumada down at the end of the third, catching him with a wild right hand just as, or just after the bell rang. The last three rounds were Pier Six types, with a game Ahumada lacking the fire power of the champion but refusing to fold.

Monzon, winning his 79th straight, was frustrated by the wrestling and pawing of the 23-year-old Licata, who was willing if ineit. Licata hit the deck in the eighth round, survived the ninth, but Monzon had found the range and referee Tony Perez wisely decided Licata had had enough after 2:43 of the 10th.

It isn't likely Licata will sue him, as Ali did for stopping the Wepner match in the closing seconds of the 15th round.

Moneywise, the Garden did well, the gate being announced as $403,625.98.

Life Changes Quickly For a Couple of Stones

NEW YORK (UPI) — How quickly life changes.

In early May, Steve Stone won all five all of his decisions for the Chicago Cubs while George Stone was wondering if he'd ever pitch again for the New York Mets.

On Monday night, George bested Steve 5-1 to record his second victory in three decisions since rejoining the Mets' staff after a year's absence due to a torn rotator cuff in his shoulder. The loss dropped Steve's record to 5-3.

It was George Stone's first complete game since May 21, 1974, when he also downed the Cubs.

"I'm not known as a distance man, not known for my complete games," Stone said. "But I don't forget the complete games. That's the fun part."

Since returning to active duty, George has pitched effectively in all four starts. He is no longer able to throw fastballs consistently so he relies on an assortment of well-placed offspead pitches, throwing an occasional hard one to keep opposing batters off stride.

"I'm pitching the same way I always have," he said. "Control is just as good as it was and the way I've pitched the last four games for effectiveness ... well, if I'm as effective the rest of the year, I'll be well satisfied."

Steve Stone's season has gone in an opposite direction. After starting the season with five victories, he was injured, placed on the disabled list and since returning hasn't been able to find the fastball that surprised National League hitters in April.

Accordingly, while George Stone was in full control all the way, Steve struggled into the eighth with a 1-1 tie.

Mike Phillips led off the Mets' eighth with a walk and after Felix Millan sacrificed, Wayne Garrett also walked, bringing reliever Darold Knowles into the game. Rusty Staub singled to snap the tie and Ed Kranepool followed with another hit to score Garrett.

After Dave Kingman struck out, the runners advanced on a passed ball. Del Unser was walked intentionally to load the bases and Jerry Grote reached base on an infield hit to score the third run of the inning. George Stone then capped the rally with a run-scoring single.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh downed Montreal, 5-3; Cincinnati trimmed Houston, 9-6, in 12 innings; St. Louis edged Philadelphia, 4-2; and Los Angeles whipped San Diego, 4-1.

Travers Lucks Out

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Chris Chambliss made Bill Travers talk to himself but that was nothing compared with what Bobby Darwin did to Rudy May.

"I just walked back to the dugout, paced back and forth and talked to myself," Travers said Monday night after serving up a ninth inning home run to Chambliss. "I told myself, 'You're a dumb ass for making that pitch. You've let these guys down.'"

Chambliss' homer gave the New York Yankees a 4-3 lead over the Brewers in a crucial game between title contenders. Darwin wiped out the lead and the Yankee hopes, however, when he slammed a pinch-hit two-run homer off May in the ninth to give the Brewers a 5-4 victory.

May had made Darwin look bad on the two pitches before the homer—sweeping curves that Darwin swung at and missed.

Travers, a lanky left-hander who looks even younger than his 22 years, said pitching coach Ken McBride told him that if May threw a fast ball to Darwin, "he's going to hit it out. He'd have to be crazy to throw a fast ball."

"By God, he did,," Travers said, still amazed at the streak of luck that has seen him run his record this year to 4-0.

Travers and May were locked in a duel up to the ninth.

Walt Williams had touched Travers for a homer in the first but the Brewers scored three unearned runs in the fourth on an error, a double by George Scott and Bobby Mitchell's home run.

The Yanks scored again in the fifth on a two-out triple by Ed Brinkman and a single by Sandy Alomar.

Travers walked Thurman Munson to lead off the ninth and Chambliss homered just over the right field wall.

In other American League games, Chicago, behind Wilbur Wood, beat Oakland, 6-1; Baltimore beat Boston, 8-2, after losing the first game, 5-2; Cleveland swept Detroit, 4-1, and 3-2; and California routed Minnesota, 10-3. Kansas City and Texas were not scheduled.

Connors Meets Ramirez

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — When Mexico blasted the United States out of the Davis Cup, many an expert wondered what the result would have been if Jimmy Connors had been on the American team.

They'll get a good idea Tuesday when Connors meets Raul Ramirez, who was largely responsible for the Mexican victory, in the singles quarterfinals of the $268,600 Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

The bookmakers have no doubt. They have made top-seeded Connors an odds-on favorite to beat eighth-seeded Ramirez and advance to the semifinals where he will meet the winner of the match between Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and 11th seed Roscoe Tanner, the big hitter from Lookout Mountain, Tenn. And the bookies expect Connors to go on to retain his title.

Both the above matches are in the top half of the draw. In the lower half Arthur Ashe of Miami, the sixth seed who was second betting favorite until he dropped a set to an unseeded Briton, plays Sweden's 19-year-old Bjorn Borg, the third seed, today.

If Ashe can get by Borg he has a good chance of taking part in what could be the first All American men's final in 28 years.

In the other quarterfinals, Holland's ninth seed,Tom Okker, plays Australia's 16th seed, Tony Roche, who ousted Ken Rosewall last week in the tournament's biggest upset.

The men had a rest day Monday while top seed Chris Evert, third seed Billie Jean King of San Mateo, Calif., fourth seed Evonne Goolagong Cawley and fifth seed Margaret Court, both of Australia—women who hold a total of 10 Wimbledon singles crowns among them — reached the semifinals.

Miss Evert, the Fort Lauderdale, Fla. defending champion, dropped a set to unseeded Betty Stove of Holland, who played the tennis of her life in the early games, before coming back to win 5-7, 7-5, 6-0 and win an ovation that was as much for her fighting spirit as for her play.

Mrs King, eliminated from the tournament at the same stage last year by Olga Morozova, did not give the Russian seventh seed a chance today. She took an early lead on a court made tricky by cross winds and was never in serious trouble. Her backhand hadthe pigtailed Morozova muttering aloud in Russian.

Miss Court, who only decided to compete three days before the tournament opened because she thought she was out of condition due to a second baby and a calf injury, demolished the chunky second seed, Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia, 6-3, 6-4.

Did Johnson Lose It?

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Victorious Hale Irwin will debate anybody who questions whether he won the Western Open Monday for his second tournament triumph this year or George Johnson lost it.

But on the record, Johnson was ahead at the halfway point, tied with 18 holes to play, and tied with only three holes to play. Then his golf game exploded, and he lost. Irwin won the $200,000 event with a one-under-par 283.

Irwin said at midpoint when he was a stroke behind "two par rounds might pass everybody." He didn't do that well. He had a par round and a two-over-par round, and whether he would have won the $40,000 had Johnson's game not collapsed will never be settled.

But Irwin got the lead on the 16th hole when Johnson drove into a trap, chipped badly and took two putts to go over par. On the 17th hole, Johnson, trying to become the second black man to qualify for the Masters, gave Irwin the tournament.

There, after a drive into a rutted lie in the rough, Johnson pulled out a 9-iron and slammed the ball out of bounds. It cost him a triple bogey seven and put Irwin four strokes ahead of him and one ahead of Bobby Cole. It shook Johnson so much that he blew to another double bogey and a tie for seventh at the finish.

Braves Trim Ions, 5-2

KINGSTON — The Kingston Braves managed only one hit against the Wappingers Falls Ions at Dietz Stadium Monday night, but that didn't prevent the locals from stretching their Hudson Valley Rookie League record to 7-1 with a 5-2 victory.

Pitching was the diffenrence once again, for while Tom Whitaker was scattering six hits and striking out 11 batters, loser Jeff Ross was walking nine. The Ions further undermined their cause by committing five errors.

Rich Koegel got the Kingston single in the first inning, and it came after free passes to Bob Marz and Skip Lyons to load the bases. Another walk to Tom Gallo produced one run, and Whitaker hit a sacrifice fly to drive in another.

The lead jumped to 4-0 in the fourth. Ross again got wild and passed out three bases on balls. The Ions could have gotten out of the jam, but an error delayed the end of the inning and allowed two runs to score.

Whitaker gave up an earned run in the fifth and gave up two singles and two of his four walks in the seventh for the losers' final run. Ross' ninh walk of the game and two more Wappingers errors enabled Kingston to score once in the sixth.

The Braves resume their schedule tonight facing the Newburgh Nuclears and Wednesday the Poughkeepsie Lasers. Both games are at Dietz Stadium at 8 p.m.

Lions Clinch RVBL Title

KYSERIKE — One of Bob Smith's three RBI's was the winning run for the Rondout Valley Lions Club which defeated Lamontville, 5-4 to win the first half championship of the RondoutValley Babe Ruth League.

In Kingston Junior BRL action, the VFW topped the Knights of Columbus, 6-1, and Chidsey DeForest downed the Elks, 11-7.

Smith belted a double to cap a three-run rally in the fifth inning and make himself a winner on the mound. He threw a five-hitter, surviving a four-run third inning by Lamontville. Smith's nine-strikeout performance bettered a three-hit stint by loser Tony Botsakos.

Bob Schlanger fanned 11 and gave up only four hits to pitch the Vets to victory. Both teams scored a run in the first inning, but the VFW nicked Bob Diers for three in the second to take the lead for keeps. Schlanger, Bob Easter and Ed Debrosky all knocked in runs for the VFW.

Dan Curlin issued 12 walks to allow Chidsey to take an insurmountable 11-4 lead on only four hits. Charlie McDonough, who belted two of the winners' hits, went all the way for the win, spacing five hits. Bob Modeen had three RBI's for the winners while Jim Brown doubled for the Elks.

Knicks, Braves Settle Dispute

CHICAGO (UPI) — The New York Knicks and the Buffalo Braves have settled their dispute over Eddie Donovan, giving the National Basketball Association Board of Governors one less item on their agenda when they meet in special session today.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien announced the settlement of the Donovan dispute Monday. The Knicks said the dispute was regrettable. The Braves contended that New York had tampered with Donovan while he still was under contract as their general manager. Donovan since has rejoined the Knicks in a similar capacity.

O'Brien also announced that the pending law suit between the Braves and Donovan would be discontinued and that the claims made by both parties in that litigation were withdrawn.

The commissioner stated that the matter was closed and that all parties were precluded from having any discussion on it.

Memoriam

In loving memory of my mother, Theresa Carpino, who passed away July 1, 1969.
What would I give to see your smile,
And sit with you and talk awhile
Day and night I think of you,
The things you used to say and do.
The blow was sudden, the shock severe,
To part with you so kind and dear.
I wonder why you had to die
Without a chance to say goodbye.
Loving Daughter

Of the happiness we knew;

HUSBAND,
CLAUDE BARRINGER

Refused to Search In Plane Disaster

NEW YORK (UPI) — A National Airlines pilot, fearing severe wind currents that already had brought down an Eastern Airlines jetliner, refused last Tuesday to search for the crashed plane, according to taped conversations with the control tower.

The Eastern Boeing 727 traveling from New Orleans to New York crashed on an approach to Kennedy Airport, killing 112 persons and injuring 12 others —the worst single aircraft disaster in U.S. history.

The plane hit just short of runway 22L during an afternoon thunderstorm. Moments earlier, another Eastern plane reported severe wind currents on the runway and received permission to divert to Newark Airport.

According to tapes released Monday by the Federal Aviation Agency, the pilot of National Airlines Flight 1004, which was following the illfated Eastern Flight 66, was asked by the tower to "go around and maintain 1,000 (feet).

"As you overfly the approach end, see if there's an aircraft on fire in the, ah, grassy area."

The National pilot told the controller he was going to disregard this instruction. He said, "We're gonna try and avoid whatever he went into. We do not see the aircraft. We're not going to get into it."

Prior to the crash, John Kleven, pilot of Flight 66, confirmed to the tower he had heard the pilot of the other EAL plane —Flight 902 — warn of a "pretty good (wind) shear" —shifting currents at various altitudes.

Flight 902, a Lockheed TriStar jetliner, reported at 4:00:04 p.m.: "We had, ah, pretty good shear pulling us to the right, and, ah, down, and visibility was nil —nil out over the marker ... at about 200 feet it was, eh, nothing."

The controller responded, "Okay, the, ah, shear, you say, pulled you right and down?"

"Yeah," the pilot of 902 said. "We were on course, and, ah, down to about 250 feet. The airspeed dropped to about 10 knots below the bug (optimum landing speed), and our rate of descent was up to 1,500 feet a minute, so we put takeoff power on and we went around in a hundred feet."

The controller asked Eastern 66 if had heard the report from EAL 902 and Kleven replied; "That's affirmative."

The controller then cleared the jetliner for its appraoch to runway 22-L and Kleven responded: "Okay, we'll let you know about the conditions."

The first indication of the wind shear came at 3:57 p.m. when the pilot of a Flying Tiger Line DC-8 cargo plane recommended runway 22L be closed.

" ... Ah, I just highly recommend that you change the runways, and, ah, land northwest. You have such a tremendous wind shear down near, ah, near the ground on the final (approach)," the Flying Tiger pilot said.

"Okay," the tower said, "We're indicating wind right down the runway at 15 knots, when you landed."

"I don't care what you're indicating," the Flying Tiger pilot insisted. "I'm just telling you that there's such a wind shear on the final on that runway, you should change it to the northwest."

The controller did not respond and Runway 22L remained open.

Ann Landers To Be Among The Lovelorn

CHICAGO (UPI) - Syndicated advice columnist Ann Landers, in "a sad and personal message" to her readers, announced Monday night she will be divorced from her husband, Jules Lederer, after 36 years of marriage.

The Chicago Sun-Times columnist, whose real name is Eppie Lederer, said in early Tuesday editions she felt she owed it to her readers to make the announcement in her column. She said her marriage was "one of the world's best" and refused to elaborate on the reasons for ending it in divorce.

"In my 20 years as Ann Landers this is the most difficult column I have ever tried to put together," said Mrs. Lederer.

"I do so after many hours of soul-searching. Should it be written at all? Would it be appropriate? Would it be fair? I have decided yes —because you, my readers, are also my friends. I owe it to you to say something. There should be some word directly from me.

"The sad, incredible fact is that after 36 years of marriage, Jules and I are being divorced. As I write these words, it is as if I am referring to a letter from a reader. It seems unreal that I am writing about my own marriage."

She said "every word" in two previous colmns she had written about the intimacy of her marriage was true and that "very little that was said then could not be said today —in complete honesty."

"Jules is an extraordinary man," she said. "His nickname for me was 'The queen.' He was loving, supportive and generous. He is still all those things —and I will always cherish our wonderful years together.

"That we are going our separate ways is one of life's strangest ironies. How did it happen that something so good for so long didn't last forever? The lady with all the answers does not know the answer to this one.

"Perhaps there is a lesson there for all of us. At least, it is there for me. Never say, 'It couldn't happen to us!'"

Save The Whale Battle Continuing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It's the ecologists eight and the Russians —well, they're reportedly on the run —in the struggle in the Pacific to save the whale.

The Phyllis Cormack, a Canadian fishing ship operated by the ecology-oriented Greenpeace Foundation, last Friday confronted a Russian vessel trying to kill a whale and sent the flotilla heading south at full speed.

Two men in a high-speed rubber raft maneuvered in front of a Soviet vessel in an attempt to prevent the killing of a sperm whale.

The Russian's 250-pound harpoon narrowly missed two crewmen aboard and killed the whale.

"One of the Russian ships passed within about 20 yards of us, turned a harpoon gun at us, then cut in front of our bow," said Bob Hunter, a reporter for the Vancouver, B.C., Sun who was aboard the rubber craft.

"It looked bad for a moment," Hunter said in a ship-to-shore interview Monday. "The Russians took several runs at us with their chaser boats to intimidate us, but it didn't change our directions at all."

"They didn't care whether they blasted us out of the water or not," said George Korotova, the other crewman on the rubber boat.

Court Term Ended, Broke No New Ground

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court has ended a term in which it granted new rights for women and students and applied federal price-fixing laws to lawyers. There were both victories and defeats for miniorities and consumers.

The opinions in about 150 cases nibbled around big issues decided in the past rather than cutting new swaths in the law.

But the court grappled with problems of the mentally ill for the first time in a ruling that involuntary commitment for purely custodial care is unconstitutional.

In the batch of term ending actions Monday, the court:

—• Ruled a criminal defendant has a constitutional right to act as his own lawyer if he is literate, competent and exercising his free will.

—• Barred the U.S. Border Patrol from conducting warrantless auto searches at established check points for the purpose of halting illegal Mexican immigration.

—• Agreed to decide whether evidence seized during an arrest under a law later ruled unconstitutional can be introduced at a murder trial.

—• Agreed to decide if at-large elections unconstitutionally dilute the black vote where blacks constitute a majority of the population but a minority of registered voters.

When the court reconvenes in October, the big issue facing it will be capital punishment, a life and death matter for 283 inmates facing execution.

In the past term, the court expanded rights of students by holding that they must be given a hearing of some kind — -however informal —before they can be suspended. And it held school baord members liable for damages if they intentionally violate the constitutional rights of the student.

In a gradual shift of attitude toward women, the court, casting aside "old notions," ruled a father cannot stop supporting his daughter at age 18 while continuing to support his son until 21. The court also held that exclusion of women as a class from jury lists denies a criminal defendant his right to an impartial jury.

It ruled Social Security survivors' benefits may not be withheld from widowers with small children when they are paid to widows.

In the consumer and environmental field, the court denied attorneys' fees to winning parties without a specific provision in the law to that effect, thus drying up much of the income counted on by private groups to finance law suits against oil companies and other corporate giants.

But in ruling that minimum fee schedules set by lawyers violates antitrust laws, the court encouraged price competition among attorneys that can benefit the consumer. And it ruled unanimously that company executives are responsible for rodent-infested foods stored in warehouses and impurities in drugs and cosmetics.

Blacks won a decision that companies normally will be required to shell out back pay awards when they have discriminated on the basis of race. On the other hand, the court encouraged city annexations of white suburban areas by holding that dilution of the black vote is not enough, by itself, to make the merger unlawful.

Your Astrograph

For Wednesday, July 2, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be lucky today with social contacts, but you could generate sparks with a business associate or on the home front.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Ideas others try to impose upon you today aren't necessarily in your best interests. Do things the way you feel they should be done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Continue to treat your purse with respect today. Stay abreast of your current obligations. Avoid making new ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll fare better in commercial dealings today if you bar those who have no business being there. Deal only with those involved. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Though your motives will be honorable today, one who likes to make problems will try to distort your intent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you want others to share, you'll first have to put on the line some of what you're holding back.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You'll be involved in a venture with two friends. Each will pull in a different direction. You may end up with a giraffe, instead of a horse.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If working with unfamiliar materials, be extra-careful. Test your procedures as you go. You could be very wasteful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you can count on Lady Luck to bail you out of tight spots. Today, she isn't all that reliable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't neglect important home projects. If you sweep them under the rug, they'll haunt you later at an embarrassing moment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be sure you're able to back any oral claims today. Someone is waiting to challenge you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll still have to resist temptation to spend frivolously. Pick up that new dress later, at a better bargain.

Your Birthday

July 2, 1975

Your career prospects this year are very promising, if you keep your shoulder to the wheel. Whatever pressures you'll have to face can be overcome.

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams

MEANING: (Q.) Rhoda is cute. And she just seems to have all the luck. She always gets boys and other things. For a long time I accepted that. But lately I've realized I'm cute too, but I just don't get anywhere.

Could you give me some advice? If I told my mother she just wouldn't know what I mean. I hope you know what I mean. —NO LUCK IN CONNECTICUT

(A.) Yes, I know what you mean. Girl friends are fine, but there comes a time when boys are better.

I am sure your mother knows this and understands it. You and Rhoda are like flowers. Flowers bloom one at a time. Rhoda bloomed before you did, but now your time has come.

Arrange to be around boys more and around Rhoda less. Be friendly to the boys you like. Be patient, and you, too, will be lucky.

LIES: (Q.) I went with Phil for three days. Then I decided I didn't like him any more so I broke up with him. He has been telling his friends very rotten lies about me, if you know what I mean. Well, the truth is that nothing happened. I did not let him do one thing to me.

I am getting a bad reputation. Should I confront him about it in front of all his friends?—INNOCENT IN PENNSYLVANIA

(A.) Talk to Phil privately at first. Point out to him that he is lying and you want him to stop it. If he doesn't stop, face up to him in public.

(Write to Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received Jean Adams cannot send personal answers.)

Win At Bridge

Reverse Moves Contract Ahead

By Oswald & James Jacoby

In the language of bids a reverse bid should always show extra strength. More important you and your partner should know just what a reverse bid is.

We define it as any bid of a new suit that shuts out a return to an earlier bid suit at the lowest possible level. We recommend that a reverse bid by opener be a one-round force and guarantee at least 16 points; a reverse by responder be a game force and show at least 13 points. For the rest of this week we will show reverse bids at work.

South's two-heart bid was a classic reverse call. North would have to return to clubs at the three level if he wanted to bid clubs. As it was, North bid three hearts and South settled for game.

He managed to make six due to the very even way his opponents' cards were divided. He ducked the first diamond, won the second one, cashed ace-king of clubs, ruffed a club, played dummy's king and jack of hearts and overtook with his queen after East played the 10.

Then he ruffed his last diamond, played ace and another spade, ruffed it, drew the last trump, and made the last two tricks with small clubs.

Ford Gives Warning on Mideast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has told reporters the United States does not want to impose a settlement on the Middle East, but warned a continued deadlock would be an "open invitation for another war."

In an interview Monday with three journalists, Ford also said there is "considerable merit" in a recommendation that someone other than a career intelligence officer normally should head the CIA.

Ford denied news reports from Israel of an American "ultimatum" to the Jewish state to make further concessions in the search for Middle East peace.

"It is obvious that for us to arbitrarily impose such a settlement would tend to get such a settlement off on the wrong foot," he was quoted as saying by David Broder and Marilyn Berger of the Washington Post.

He said the United States would have no choice but to suggest reconvening the Geneva conference and recommending a broad solution to the Arab-Israel disputes unless the deadlock is broken.

Continued delay in reaching an accord "would result in unrest on all sides. It would be an open invitation to another war," Ford was quoted as saying by the third newsman at the interview, columnist Marquis Childs.

"We are going to make a decision. And if there is no success in the step-by-step (negotiating) process," Ford told the reporters, "we will have to go to a broader, comprehensive program and recommend the reconvening of the Geneva conference."

According to the Washington Post account, Ford said there was merit in an advisory commission's recommendation a career officer should not direct the CIA. But Ford said he had "no plans" at this time to replace veteran intelligence officer William Colby as head of the agency.

The President said CIA activities are "basically" being well monitored from the White House now, but warned against investigations that "could be very harmful to the intelligence community."

He was quoted as saying the current Senate probe of the CIA is "right on the border" of incurring that risk and it would be "very ill advised" for the committee to hold public hearings on assassinations.

Ford was quoted as saying "there is not much I can do" about congressional investigations, but if investigators "should act irresponsibly, we might have to exercise limitations" on information given to the committee.

Ford also said he would make his proposals for decontrol of domestic oil prices later this week and risk another veto battle with Congress if it blocked his action.

He said he had "no prior knowledge" of former President Richard Nixon's plans to appear before Watergate grand jurors last week.

Mrs. Gandhi Critic Has Heart Attack

DELHI, India (UPI) — India's most prominent opposition leader, fasting since he was jailed last week in a crackdown against government critics, has reportedly suffered a serious heart attack in his prison cell.

Supporters of Jayaprakash Narayan said Monday the 72-year-old critic of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was taken to the All-India Medical Institute after the heart attack.

A spokesman at the hospital confirmed that Narayan had been admitted but refused to disclose the reason or discuss his condition.

Supporters said Narayan, head of a nationwide "peaceful revolution" movement challenging Mrs. Gandhi's leadership, was felled by the heart attack Sunday night.

Narayan, one of the leaders of India's independence movement three decades ago, was among hundreds of opposition leaders seized by the government since Mrs. Gandhi imposed a state of emergency last Thursday.

Supporters said Narayan, who has patterned his movement after Mohandas Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign for independence, began a hunger strike in his jail cell soon after being seized.

Narayan, arrested in New Delhi Thursday, was a comrade of Jawaharlal Nehru, Mrs. Gandhi's father, during India's drive for independence from Britain.

The government has reported seizing about 900 persons during the crackdown against opposition leaders allegedly taking part in a "widespread conspiracy" threatening the country's internal security.

Narayan has supported calls by five non-Communist opposition parties for a nationwide campaign to oust Mrs. Gandhi as prime minister because of her conviction for campaign fraud in the 1971 national election.

Reports of Narayan's heart attack in prison could anger his followers across the country, but strict press censorship imposed by Mrs. Gandhi made it hard for most Indians to learn of his illness.

The Indian press failed to carry reports about hundreds of club-swinging police crushing a demonstration in Delhi Sunday night against Mrs. Gandhi.

On Monday, the government gave Washington Post correspondent Lewis Simons 24 hours to leave the country for allegedly violating the new censorship rules.

"It was a cumulative thing," Simons said. "The main reason was one particular story I wrote before the censorship but I was told other stories since then led to my expulsion."

The government has warned that foreign correspondents would be "sternly dealt with" for failing to submit dispatches to government censors for clearance. Simons said he had not passed his copy through censors.
